

I was born 1957 in Germany. After 15 years trying to find myself I began to study first Psychology 1994 and Naturopathy 1995. Today I am a German Naturopath (Bachelor of Health Science), Intuitive, Personal and Health Coach, Trainer for Mind-Body Medicine and Integral Spirituality. I have conducted seminars for Doctors and Health Professionals in Europe about Bio-Psycho-Social- and Spiritual Medicine for several years. I am also co- author of 'Process Oriented Cancer Therapy', published in Germany 2001.

My Life was marked by unexpected surprises and changes since I was 7 years old. After my Dad left the family when I was 13 years old, I started to take responsibility for my own life but as well for my siblings and my parents. I just took over because I felt they were not able to take responsibility for themselves.

But I have to say whenever I took responsibility for myself I felt a sense of pleasure and happiness and I was proud for doing so even if my actions not always were the best and the learning lessons for my life were quite profound. I could blame no one for my decisions and I accepted the consequences. Yet whenever I took responsibility for others I suffered from disappointment, frustration and pain.

Even though as a Naturopath I felt I have much more responsibility to heal people who came to see me and were paying for my services. The first years working as a health professional I took it very personal when someone didn't get the results they expected and which I also thought they should achieve.

Every book I could find, every seminar I completed was for the goal to get better and better in my profession so I could finally help every single patient who came to see me. But life doesn't work like this. Particularly as I had specialised very early in my career in cancer support. I had finally to give up my high expectations for myself and I had to admit that the only way for perfect health and a fulfilled life is to take 100% responsibility, and no other can do that for us.

After my own personal experience with breast cancer I completely understood and felt 100% what cancer really is - all my knowledge and all the theories didn't help but then I knew how to get out of it.

Exactly this is what I can offer my clients today. How to take responsibility for what should happen in their lives. I am able to give direction and support in finding self responsibility, understanding of what's going on in their bodies and how to get their perfect health back or even support clients if they decide to pass over.

I can say that I am the remedy someone needs who is ready for a happy, healthy and fulfilled life.
